

208c.

ROYAL COURT
(Poursuites Criminelles)

15th December, 1989

Before: The Bailiff, and Jurats Lucas and Hamon

Her Majesty's Attorney General

- v -

Ricardo George Santo Caires
and
Christopher O'Driscoll

Both accused charged with numerous counts of larceny, breaking and entering and larceny, and malicious damage.

Advocate S.C. Nicolle for the Crown
Advocate C.J. Scholefield for the Defendants.

JUDGMENT

THE BAILIFF: Very well you two, you have heard what the Crown has said. If you do this again when you are grown up and you are no longer protected by your youth, you will get a prison sentence and a fairly substantial one. For the time being, however, you are placed on probation for three years and it means that you have got to do what you are told by your Probation Officer and you are ordered to perform 180 hours Community Service. If you breach your Probation Order you will come back here and you may well get other sentences imposed.

n.b. no authorities.
