

Freedom of Information Act 2000 (Section 50) Environmental Information Regulations 2004

Decision Notice

Date: 9 August 2010

Public Authority: Basingstoke and Deane Borough Council
Address: Civic Offices
London Road
Basingstoke
Hampshire
RG21 4AH

Summary

The complainant submitted a request to Basingstoke and Deane Borough Council ('the Council') for information from environmental records held on a property in Basingstoke. The complainant specified that he wished to view the records in person. The Council agreed to provide some of the information requested but only on the provision of a set fee, and refused to provide other parts of the information requested. The Commissioner's decision is that the Council failed to comply with regulation 5(1) as it failed to make information available on request and regulation 5(2) as it failed to make it available within the statutory time for compliance. The Commissioner found that the Council breached regulation 6(1) as it refused to comply with the complainant's request to receive information in a particular format. In addition, the Council has breached regulation 11(4) by failing to provide the outcome of its internal review within 40 working days. The Commissioner requires the Council to make the requested information available for the complainant to inspect within 35 days of this notice.

The Commissioner's Role

1. The Environmental Information Regulations (EIR) were made on 21 December 2004, pursuant to the EU Directive on Public Access to Environmental Information (Council Directive 2003/4/EC). Regulation 18 provides that the EIR shall be enforced by the Information Commissioner (the "Commissioner"). In effect, the enforcement provisions of Part 4 of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 (the "Act") are imported into the EIR.

Background

2. Section 3 of the Local Land Charges Act 1975 (LLCA) compels all local authorities to generate, maintain and update a Local Land Charges Register. Under the LLCA applicants can obtain an 'Official Search' of the register by submitting form LLC1 to the relevant Local Authority. This is usually accompanied by form CON29R.
3. The CON29R form is comprised of two parts. Part 1 contains a list of standard enquiries about a property. Optional enquiries are contained in Part 2.
4. When a property or piece of land is purchased or leased, a request for a search is sent to the relevant local authority.
5. The complainant represents a company which provides information about property and land issues.

The Request

6. On 5 February 2010, the complainant requested access to inspect the land charges register free of charge, and information required to complete the following questions on the CON29R form: 1.1(f)-(h) ; 1.2 ; 2 (a)-(d); 3.1 ; 3.2 ; 3.3 (a)-(b); 3.4 (a)-(f); 3.5; 3.6 (a)-(i); 3.7 (a)-(f) ; 3.8 ; 3.9 (a)-(n) ; 3.10 (a)-(b) ; 3.11 ; 3.12 (a)-(c) and 3.13.¹ The complainant wished to inspect this information in relation to a specific named property.
7. On 15 February 2010, the Council wrote to the complainant and stated that some CON29R information could be inspected free of charge and for the remainder a charge of £4.46 would be made. The Council stated that this fee was calculated in accordance with The Local Authorities \(England\) \(Charges for Property Searches\) Regulations 2008 (the CPSR). The Council informed the complainant that a standard charge of £22 was levied for inspection of the local land charges register, in accordance with a statutory charge set by the Ministry of Justice.

8. On 1 March 2010, the complainant requested that the Council conduct an internal review of its decision not to allow inspection of the requested information free of charge.
9. On 11 March 2010, the Council wrote to the complainant and reiterated that the complainant would have to pay the set fees in order to access the requested information. It also explained that as it viewed the matter as a "legal issue, revolving around a difference of opinion", it did not intend to review its previous decision.
10. After the intervention of the Commissioner, the Council provided its internal review outcome to the complainant on 6 May 2010.

The Investigation

Scope of the case

11. On 16 March 2010 the complainant contacted the Commissioner to complain about the Council's compliance with the requirements of the EIR.
12. During the course of the investigation, the Council confirmed that as a result of the new Local Land Charges (Amendment) Act 2010, it would allow applicants to conduct personal searches of the Land Charges Register free of charge. This part of the request has therefore been excluded from the scope of the investigation.
13. The Council confirmed that it did not hold information relevant to questions 2(a)-(d), 3.2, 3.3(a)-(b), 3.4(a)-(f), 3.5, 3.6(a)-(l) and 3.7(e). The information is instead held by Hampshire County Council or the relevant water authority. The complainant accepts that this is the case and therefore the Commissioner has excluded these parts of the request from the scope of his investigation.
14. The Council confirmed that information relevant to questions 1.2, 3.9(a)-(b), 3.10(a)-(b) was available for public inspection either at its offices or on its website. The Commissioner has therefore excluded these parts of the request from the scope of his investigation.
15. In addition, the Council has confirmed that although it routinely holds information of this nature, there is no specific information held relevant to the property in question in relation to questions 3.1, 3.8, 3.9(c)-(n), 3.11 and 3.12(a)-(c). This means that there is no relevant information available for the complainant to request; in effect, the fact that no information exists provides a response to the complainant's request for information necessary to complete these sections of the CON29R form. These parts of the request have also been excluded from the scope of the investigation.

16. The remaining information that has been the focus of the Commissioner's investigation is the information relevant to questions 1.1(f)-(h), 3.7(a)-(d) and (f), and 3.13 of the CON29R form.

Chronology

17. On 9 April 2010, the Commissioner wrote to the Council informing it that a complaint had been received regarding this request. This letter explained the requirements of the EIR and stated that the public authority needed to either disclose the requested information or explain why it was being withheld. The Commissioner also drew the Council's attention to an Information Tribunal decision, East Riding of Yorkshire Council v Information Commissioner EA/2009/0069, which dealt with similar issue. The Council was asked to provide an internal review decision considering the request under EIR to the complainant by 7 May 2010 and forward a copy of this to the Commissioner.
18. On 9 April 2010, the Council acknowledged this request and confirmed that it would respond to the complainant within the prescribed timescale. It also drew the Commissioner's attention to various pieces of legislation governing the supply of property search information.
19. On 9 April 2010, the Commissioner telephoned the public authority in order to acquire more information about the nature and format of the withheld information.
20. On 6 May 2010, the Council provided its internal review outcome to both the complainant and the Commissioner. This response stated that the Council would continue to impose a fee of £22 in order to access the building control register in accordance with the Local Land Charges Amendment Rules 2009. The response also explained that the Council did not hold information relevant to some CON29R enquiries and that the complainant could access information relevant to some enquiries free of charge. It confirmed that a fee would be charged to provide answers to the outstanding CON29R questions.
21. On 2 June 2010, the Commissioner wrote to the Council setting out his initial view that as the information should be considered for disclosure under the EIR, he was unlikely to uphold charges calculated in line with

- other pieces of legislation. The Commissioner invited any further response the Council might wish to make.
22. The Council acknowledged this email on 3 June 2010 and confirmed its intention to respond.
 23. On 3 June 2010, the Commissioner wrote to the Council to enquire whether it held information relating to certain elements of the request.
 24. The Council responded to these queries on 3 June 2010.
 25. The Council provided the Commissioner with a detailed submission in support of its position on 5 July 2010.
 26. On 12 July 2010, the Commissioner wrote to the Council with some additional queries.
 27. The Council responded to these queries on 13 July 2010.
 28. On 30 July 2010, the Commissioner wrote to the Council and asked that it reconsider the complainant's request to inspect the Local Land Charges Register in light of the new Local Land Charges (Amendment) Rules 2010. These revoke the set fee of £22 levied for personal searches of the local land charges register. The amendment was published on 29 July 2010 and comes into force on 17 August 2010.
 29. On 2 August 2010, the Council confirmed that it had stopped levying a charge for personal inspection of the Register with immediate effect.

Analysis

Substantive Procedural Matters

Regulation 2

30. The Commissioner has considered whether the information requested by the complainant is environmental information as defined by the EIR.
31. The Commissioner considers that the information requested falls within regulation 2(1)(c): "measures (including administrative measure), such as policies, legislation, plans, programmes, environmental agreements, and activities affecting or likely to affect the elements and factors referred to in (a) and (b) as well as measures or activities designed to protect these elements". Information about a plan or a measure or an activity that affects or is likely to affect the elements of the environment is environmental information. The Commissioner therefore considers the information requested by the complainant to be environmental information. In its letter of 5 July 2010, the Council agrees that the requested information is environmental.

Regulation 5

32. Regulation 5(1) provides that environmental information shall be made available upon request. Regulation 5(2) provides that this information should be made available within 20 working days following receipt of the request. The complainant's original request for information was made on 5 February 2010. As yet, the Council has not provided the complainant with the requested information. The Commissioner therefore concludes that the Council has breached regulation 5(1) as it failed to make the information available on request and regulation 5(2) by failing to make the requested information available within 20 working days following receipt of the request.

Regulation 6

33. Regulation 6(1) provides an applicant with the right to request that information be made available in a particular form or format. It is the Commissioner's view that although regulation 6(1) may appear primarily to be concerned with the form or format information is provided in, it should be interpreted broadly and does provide a right to request to inspect environmental information.
34. A public authority should comply with this preference unless one of two exceptions applies. These exceptions are at regulation 6(1)(a), which provides an exception from the duty to comply with preference for a particular format where it is reasonable to make the information available in another format, and 6(1)(b), which applies when the information is already publicly available in another format.
35. The Commissioner has set out his interpretation of regulation 6(1) in decision notice FER0236058. It is the Commissioner's view that "although regulation 6(1) may appear to be primarily concerned with the particular physical form or format in which the information is provided, it should be interpreted broadly and does provide a right to request the inspection of environmental information".
36. The Council does not accept the Commissioner's interpretation. Specifically, it rejects that 'inspection' constitutes a "form or format". Rather, it views inspection as a "manner of accessing information". Therefore, it does not accept that regulation 6(1) gives an applicant the right to request to inspect information. However, the Commissioner reiterates that based on passages in interpretative aids such as the Directive and the Implementation Guide, he considers that 'inspection' constitutes a 'form or format' under regulation 6(1), and consequently, the complainant is entitled to request to inspect the requested information.

37. Despite the fact that the Council does not accept that regulation 6(1) includes the right to inspect information, it has also chosen to rely on regulation 6(1)(a) in relation to information relevant to CON29R enquiries. It has provided a comprehensive submission to support this position. As the Commissioner does not accept the Council's contention that regulation 6(1) excludes the right to request inspection, he has considered the Council's arguments for its reliance on regulation 6(1)(a).
38. The arguments submitted by the Council focus on the reasons why the Council feels that it would be unreasonable to comply with the complainant's preference for inspection in relation to the outstanding CON29R information. In assessing the Council's submission, the Commissioner has considered the findings of the Information Tribunal in East Riding of Yorkshire Council v Information Commissioner ('the Tribunal decision'). In this case, the Tribunal did not accept that the arguments put forward by East Riding demonstrated that it was reasonable to provide information in another format as set out in regulation 6(1)(a). However, the Tribunal decision emphasised that this did not mean another public authority could not demonstrate that it was reasonable in the circumstances to rely on 6(1)(a) (para. 40).
39. The information in relation to questions 1.1(f)-(h) is held on the Council's Uniform system. The Council states that this system contains a large amount of personal data, information provided to the Council in confidence, information subject to copyright, and legally privileged communications. The complainant could potentially access this if he was permitted to inspect the data on this computer system. The Council argues that any personal information is not reasonably capable of being separated from the rest of the information, as although the system can be locked down to a certain extent, personal data is spread throughout the system.
40. As the system cannot be fully locked down, the Council contends that allowing an applicant access to the Uniform system would compromise the integrity of its data. Records could be created, deleted or altered.
41. The Council argues that the Uniform software that holds the requested information is "very complex and certainly not intuitive". The Council's staff carry out a number of tasks in order to locate accurate and relevant information. This involves using software drawing tools to manually adjust outlines on maps. The Council officers also use their training, experience and local knowledge to ascertain whether information should be included in a CON29R answer, and to ensure all relevant information is located. The Council estimates that it would take at least two hours to train an applicant to use this software in order to locate the correct information.

42. If the Council allowed applicants to inspect information using its back-office terminals, it argues that there would be security issues posed to staff and their belongings, the Council's equipment, assets and records. In addition, the Council is concerned that if the complainant were allowed to inspect the requested information by accessing the Council's computer system, the list of security controls attached to the Council's Government Connect Secure Extranet (GSCX) would be breached.
43. The Council also argue that allowing applicants to inspect information on the computer system would cause disruption to its existing functions. This is because staff computer terminals would be occupied by applicants and therefore, productivity during these periods would drop.
44. Question 3.13 of the form CON29R enquires if a property is located in a 'radon affected area'. Radon is a natural radioactive gas that is present in all parts of the UK. However, certain areas have higher than average levels of radon. Exposure to particularly high levels may increase the risk of developing lung cancer. The Health Protection Agency (HPA) advises that indoor radon above 200 Becquerels per cubic metre should be reduced. This is known as the 'Action Level'. A radon potential dataset is produced jointly by the British Geological Society (BGS) and the HPA. This dataset allows an estimate to be made of the probability that a property is an area at or above the 'Action Level' for radon. The BGS provides a free radon access online. The public authority directed the complainant to this resource. However, this atlas does not provide enough detail to definitively provide an answer to question 3.13. An adequate answer can only be obtained from the radon potential dataset.
45. The Council has purchased a Radon Gas Dataset from BGS. This is purchased on a yearly basis. The licence covers five users, so the Council argues that if applicants were allowed to inspect this data themselves, it would be forced to breach its license agreement with BGS.

46. Therefore, for all of the reasons set out above, the Council submits that it is reasonable to make the information requested available in the form of a 'compiled report', rather than allowing the complainant to inspect the information.
47. In its submission of 5 July, the Council argues that this would have the effect of converting the information into a different format, because the Council would have to "locate, extrapolate, filter, refine and compile" raw data in order to produce information relevant to the complainant's request. However, the Commissioner does not accept this view. If the requested information is extracted from the originating computer system and provided to the complainant to be examined, the Commissioner considers that this would comply with the complainant's request to 'inspect' the requested information.
48. In its letter of 5 July 2010, the Council argues that "when determining whether it is reasonable to refuse to allow an applicant to examine the information requested...regard has to be made to, not just the individual request, but also to the operating environment of the public authority." The Council points to paragraphs 40 and 42(i) of the Tribunal decision in support of this position. It has consequently based some of its arguments on the impact that dealing with a large number of requests for inspection of information of this nature would cause, rather than the impact of complying with this specific request. In the financial year 2009/10, the Council received 2,379 requests for CON29R information from personal search companies, and 1,757 Official CON29R requests. If all of these applicants had stated that they wished to inspect the requested information, the Council estimates that the cost of compliance would exceed £69,000, based on an additional 1,797 staff hours.
49. Paragraph 40 of the Tribunal decision discusses an argument put forward by York Place, the property search company who were joined as an additional party in the Tribunal decision. York Place argued that the Council should only assess reasonableness solely by reference to the specific information requested, i.e. environmental records for a particular property. At paragraph 40, the Tribunal decision stated that:
- "We do not accept that argument. We believe that if a public authority is able to demonstrate that particular restrictions are reasonably necessary to prevent, for example, the inadvertent disclosure of personal data likely to be contained in certain types of record, it should be allowed to rely on a general practice intended to prevent disclosure across that range and should not be required to examine each request for information to see if it should be treated as an exception to the general rule".

The Commissioner does not accept that this supports the Council's position that it is appropriate to look at the impact of a wide range of requests when assessing if it is reasonable to provide information in a form other than inspection. Rather, the focus was on whether when considering data protection issues, a public authority was required to consider each specific request or whether it could adopt a more generic approach. The Commissioner is of the opinion that this argument does not extend to the cost of making adjustments and introducing new procedures in order to accommodate such requests. Nor does it extend to consideration of the accumulative cost of dealing with an anticipated volume of requests.

50. Paragraph 42(i) of the Tribunal decision recounts the comments made by a Council official about the number of searches it received per week, and the potential costs of allowing inspection in all cases. The Tribunal made no comment on whether it felt that this was an appropriate method of assessing whether it was reasonable to provide information in a format other than the one specified.
51. The Commissioner therefore does not accept the Council's contention that it is appropriate to consider the impact of complying with a large range of similar requests when assessing whether regulation 6(1)(a) applies. Instead, he considers that each request for information should be considered on an individual basis. The Council does not suggest that it would be manifestly unreasonable to comply with this particular request for information; indeed in its letter of 5 July 2010 it states that in relation to the complainant's specific request for information, relevant to a particular property:

"it would arguably be possible for an officer to meet the complainant's agent, escort him or her...to the back office computer, log onto the computer...talk him or her through the complicated processes to retrieve, refine and compile the necessary CON29R information (whilst keeping him or her under constant supervision) and then escort him or her to the front office area".

The Commissioner is therefore of the opinion that the Council could reasonably comply with the complainant's request to receive information in a particular form, specifically inspection. Consequently, the Commissioner considers that the exception to complying with this preference under regulation 6(1)(a) has been applied incorrectly.

52. Since neither of the exceptions to the Council's obligation to provide information in the form and format requested can be satisfied, the Commissioner concludes that the Council has breached regulation 6(1) and complainant should be permitted to inspect the requested information.

Regulation 8

53. Regulation 8 provides a general right for public authorities to charge for making information available. However, that right is subject to a number of conditions. The relevant conditions in this case are set out in regulation 8(2).
54. Regulation 8(2)(a) states that a public authority shall not make any charge for allowing an applicant to access any public registers or lists of environmental information, and regulation 8(2)(b) states that a public authority shall not make any charge for allowing an applicant to examine the information requested at a place which the authority makes available.
55. The Council submits that, irrespective of whether the requested information is provided for the complainant to inspect on a computer or in a hard copy, it will have to engage in "locating, extrapolating, filtering, refining and compiling" the requested information from raw data. It therefore argues that it is entitled to impose a charge under regulation 8(3) in order to recover the costs of this work. However, the Commissioner does not accept that the Council is entitled to levy any such charge. This is because the complainant's request is for the information required to answer CON29R queries about a specific property. Therefore, by locating and isolating the specific information that the complainant wishes to inspect, the Council is merely complying with the complainant's request.
56. As detailed above, the Council has agreed that answers to the CON29R questions can be provided to the complainant upon provision of a fee. It intends to impose a charge in order to provide this information. Regulation 8(2)(b) provides that a public authority is not entitled to charge a fee for allowing inspection of information. The Commissioner notes that in this case, the Council has refused to provide access to the requested information and so has not breached regulation 8(2)(b) in relation to the CON29R information. However, the Commissioner is of the opinion that the complainant is entitled to inspect this information free of charge.
57. The Council made detailed submissions relating to charging under regulation 8(3), however as the Commissioner has concluded the complainant is entitled to inspect this information free of charge he has not gone on to consider those submissions in this Decision Notice.

Regulation 11

58. Regulation 11(3) provides that a public authority must reconsider its response to a request for information upon receiving representations from an applicant. Regulation 11(4) provides that the outcome of a decision under regulation 11(3) must be communicated to the applicant as soon as possible and within 40 working days after representations were received.
59. The complainant requested an internal review on 1 March 2010. The outcome of this review was not provided until 6 May 2010. Therefore, the Commissioner finds that the Council has breached regulation 11(4).

The Decision

60. The Commissioner's decision is that Basingstoke and Deane Council did not deal with the request for information in accordance with the EIR. The Council has breached regulation 5(1) by failing to make information available on request and regulation 5(2) of the EIR by failing to make the requested information available within the statutory time for compliance. The Council has breached regulation 6(1) by failing to comply with the complainant's request for information relevant to questions on the CON29R form to be made available in a particular format. In addition, the Council has breached regulation 11(4) as it failed to provide the outcome of its internal review within the statutory time for compliance.

Steps Required

61. The Commissioner requires that the Council make the requested information available for the complainant to inspect free of charge.
62. The public authority must take the steps required by this notice within 35 calendar days of the date of this notice.
