TRADE MARKS ACT 1994

IN THE MATTER OF APPLICATION NO. 3301442

BY SHENIKA BLYGEN TO REGISTER:

AS A TRADE MARK IN CLASSES 25, 35 & 41

AND

IN THE MATTER OF OPPOSITION THERETO UNDER NO. 413303 BY

DRYS DENMARK APS

BACKGROUND & PLEADINGS

1. On 4 April 2018, Shenika Blygen (“the applicant”) applied to register the trade mark shown on the cover page of this decision for the goods and services in classes 25, 35 and 41 shown in the Annex to this decision. The application was published for opposition purposes on 4 May 2018.

2. The application has been opposed in full by Drys Denmark ApS (“the opponent”). The opposition is based upon section 5(2)(b) of the Trade Marks Act 1994 (“the Act”), in relation to which the opponent relies upon the following trade mark:

International Registration designating the United Kingdom (“IRUK”) no.1271484 for the trade mark DEFINE which designated the UK on 6 August 2015 and which was granted protection in the UK on 25 October 2016. The opponent indicates it relies upon the goods in class 25 of its registration i.e. “women’s clothing.”

3. The applicant filed a counterstatement which, in essence, consists of a denial of the ground upon which the opposition is based.

4. In these proceedings, the opponent is represented by Advokatfirmaet Isaksen & Nomanni; the applicant represents herself. Although neither party filed evidence, during the evidence rounds the opponent filed written submissions, which I will take into account in reaching a conclusion. Neither party requested a hearing nor did they file written submissions in lieu of attendance.

DECISION

5. The opposition is based upon section 5(2)(b) of the Act which reads as follows:

“5(2) A trade mark shall not be registered if because –

(b) it is similar to an earlier trade mark and is to be registered for goods or services identical with or similar to those for which the earlier trade mark is protected, there exists a likelihood of confusion on the part of the public, which includes the likelihood of association with the earlier trade mark.”

6. An earlier trade mark is defined in section 6 of the Act, which states:

“6. - (1) In this Act an “earlier trade mark” means –

(a) a registered trade mark, international trade mark (UK), Community trade mark or international trade mark (EC) which has a date of application for registration earlier than that of the trade mark in question, taking account (where appropriate) of the priorities claimed in respect of the trade marks,

(2) References in this Act to an earlier trade mark include a trade mark in respect of which an application for registration has been made and which, if registered, would be an earlier trade mark by virtue of subsection (1)(a) or (b), subject to its being so registered.”

7. The IRUK relied upon by the opponent qualifies as an earlier trade mark under the above provisions. Given the interplay between the dates on which the opponent’s trade mark was granted protection in the UK and the publication date of the application for registration, this earlier trade mark is not subject to the proof of use provisions.

Case law

8. The following principles are gleaned from the decisions of the courts of the European Union in Sabel BV v Puma AG, Case C-251/95, Canon Kabushiki Kaisha v Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Inc, Case C-39/97, Lloyd Schuhfabrik Meyer & Co GmbH v Klijsen Handel B.V. Case C-342/97, Marca Mode CV v Adidas AG & Adidas Benelux BV, Case C-425/98, Matratzen Concord GmbH v OHIM, Case C-3/03, Medion AG v. Thomson Multimedia Sales Germany & Austria GmbH, Case C-120/04, Shaker di L. Laudato & C. Sas v OHIM, Case C-334/05P and Bimbo SA v OHIM, Case C-591/12P.

The principles:

(a) The likelihood of confusion must be appreciated globally, taking account of all relevant factors;

(b) the matter must be judged through the eyes of the average consumer of the goods or services in question, who is deemed to be reasonably well informed and reasonably circumspect and observant, but who rarely has the chance to make direct comparisons between marks and must instead rely upon the imperfect picture of them he has kept in his mind, and whose attention varies according to the category of goods or services in question;

(c) the average consumer normally perceives a mark as a whole and does not proceed to analyse its various details;

(d) the visual, aural and conceptual similarities of the marks must normally be assessed by reference to the overall impressions created by the marks bearing in mind their distinctive and dominant components, but it is only when all other components of a complex mark are negligible that it is permissible to make the comparison solely on the basis of the dominant elements;

(e) nevertheless, the overall impression conveyed to the public by a composite trade mark may be dominated by one or more of its components;

(f) however, it is also possible that in a particular case an element corresponding to an earlier trade mark may retain an independent distinctive role in a composite mark, without necessarily constituting a dominant element of that mark;

(g) a lesser degree of similarity between the goods or services may be offset by a greater degree of similarity between the marks, and vice versa;

(h) there is a greater likelihood of confusion where the earlier mark has a highly distinctive character, either per se or because of the use that has been made of it;

(i) mere association, in the strict sense that the later mark brings the earlier mark to mind, is not sufficient;

(j) the reputation of a mark does not give grounds for presuming a likelihood of confusion simply because of a likelihood of association in the strict sense;

(k) if the association between the marks creates a risk that the public will wrongly believe that the respective goods or services come from the same or economically-linked undertakings, there is a likelihood of confusion.

The correct approach to the comparison

9. In her counterstatement, the applicant stated:

“b. There is no demonstrable confusion in the class of goods being similar because when evaluating actual conditions in the marketplace, both parties are in separate industries with separate markets. Our application evidently shows our products are fitness/sports merchandise, specifically active women's/children's wear as our service is sports/fitness related...

c... There would be no confusion to the public between both parties' trademarks, because of the opposing companies' advertisement. Their website is not found by the word 'DEFINE' nor does a suggestion of the companies' URL appear when inputting the word 'define'. The website can only be found by 'Drysdenmark'. The website implies that 'DEFINE' is a collection within a trend and implicates that 'DRYS DENMARK APS' is the brand. Another example in advertisement is social media, the Instagram account again is with the name 'DRYSDenmark' with no sign of the trademark 'DEFINE'."

10. As the opponent points out in its submissions, the applicant's approach is misguided. In Devinlec Développement Innovation Leclerc SA v OHIM, Case C-171/06P, the Court of Justice of the European Union ("CJEU") stated:

"59. As regards the fact that the particular circumstances in which the goods in question were marketed were not taken into account, the Court of First Instance was fully entitled to hold that, since these may vary in time and depending on the wishes of the proprietors of the opposing marks, it is inappropriate to take those circumstances into account in the prospective analysis of the likelihood of confusion between those marks."

11. The trade mark upon which the opponent relies is not subject to proof of use. In those circumstances, the manner in which the party's may have used their respective trade marks in trade is not relevant. Rather, in reaching a conclusion, what I am required to do is to compare the competing trade marks and the goods and services for which they are registered and applied for as they appear on the Trade Marks Register.

Comparison of goods and services

12. The applicant has applied for a vast range of goods and services in classes 25, 35 and 41, whereas the opponent only relies upon its goods in class 25 i.e. women's clothing; I shall return to class 25 shortly. Insofar as classes 35 and 41 are concerned, as one can see from the Annex to this decision, the specifications in these two classes run to 35 and 38 pages respectively. As any similarity between the opponent's goods and the vast majority of the applicant's services is not obvious, it was incumbent on the opponent to identify why it considered them to be similar. However, neither in its Notice of opposition or submissions does it provide any explanation as to why it considers its goods in class 25 to be similar to the applicant's services in classes 35 and 41. Without such particularisation I am not prepared to speculate as to why the opponent might consider its goods in class 25 to be similar to, for example, "accountancy services relating to accounts receivable" in class 35 or "zoological garden services" in class 41. While I shall proceed on the basis that none of the applicant's services in classes 35 and 41 are similar to the opponent's goods in class 25, I will return to this point later in this decision when I consider the likelihood of confusion.

13. Insofar as class 25 is concerned, I begin by reminding myself of the decision of the General Court ("GC") in Gérard Meric v Office for Harmonisation in the Internal Market (Trade Marks and Designs) (OHIM) case T-133/05, in which it stated:

"29 In addition, the goods can be considered as identical when the goods designated by the earlier mark are included in a more general category, designated by the trade mark application (Case T-388/00 Institut für Lernsysteme v OHIM – Educational Services (ELS) [2002] ECR II-4301, paragraph 53) or when the goods designated by the trade mark application are included in a more general category designated by the earlier mark (Case T-104/01 Oberhauser v OHIM – Petit Liberto (Fifties) [2002] ECR II-4359, paragraphs 32 and 33; Case T-110/01 Vedial v OHIM – France Distribution (HUBERT) [2002] ECR II-5275, paragraphs 43 and 44; and Case T- 10/03 Koubi v OHIM – Flabesa (CONFORFLEX) [2004] ECR II-719, paragraphs 41 and 42).”

14. The applicant’s specification includes, for example, “Women’s clothing”, “Womens’ outerclothing”, “Women’s suits” and “Womens’ underclothing”; such goods are either literally identical to the goods upon which the opponent relies, or, as they fall within the scope of the opponent’s specification, are to be regarded as identical on the Meric principle. There are also a vast array of goods in the applicant’s specification, for example, “Articles of clothing”, “Articles of clothing for theatrical use”, “Articles of clothing made of leather”, “Articles of outer clothing”, “Articles of sports clothing” and “Articles of underclothing”, which are broad enough to include the opponent’s goods and, once again, are to be regarded as identical on the principles outlined in Meric. While I shall return to this point when I consider the likelihood of confusion, I will proceed on the basis that all of the applicant’s goods in class 25 are identical (either literally or on the Meric principle) to the opponent’s goods in the same class.

The average consumer and the nature of the purchasing act

15. As the case law above indicates, it is necessary for me to determine who the average consumer is for goods in class 25. I must then determine the manner in which these goods are likely to be selected by the average consumer in the course of trade. In Hearst Holdings Inc, Fleischer Studios Inc v A.V.E.L.A. Inc, Poeticgem Limited, The Partnership (Trading) Limited, U Wear Limited, J Fox Limited, [2014] EWHC 439 (Ch), Birss J. described the average consumer in these terms:

“60. The trade mark questions have to be approached from the point of view of the presumed expectations of the average consumer who is reasonably well informed and reasonably circumspect. The parties were agreed that the relevant person is a legal construct and that the test is to be applied objectively by the court from the point of view of that constructed person. The words “average”

denotes that the person is typical. The term “average” does not denote some form of numerical mean, mode or median.”

16. The average consumer of goods in class 25 is a member of the general public. As a member of the general public will, for the most part, self-select the goods from the shelves of a bricks and mortar retail outlet or from the equivalent pages of a website or catalogue, visual considerations are likely to dominate the selection process. That said, as goods in class 25 may also be the subject of, for example, word-of-mouth recommendations or oral requests to sales assistants (both in person and by telephone), aural considerations must not be forgotten.

17. As to the degree of care the average consumer will display when selecting goods in class 25, the cost of such goods can vary considerably. However, as the average consumer will be alive to factors such as cost, size, colour, material and compatibility with other items, the average consumer can, in my view, be expected to pay at least a normal degree of attention to their selection. As the cost and/or importance of the item increases, so too is likely to be the degree of care paid to its selection.

Comparison of trade marks

18. It is clear from Sabel BV v. Puma AG (particularly paragraph 23) that the average consumer normally perceives a trade mark as a whole and does not proceed to analyse its various details. The same case also explains that the visual, aural and conceptual similarities of the trade marks must be assessed by reference to the overall impressions created by them, bearing in mind their distinctive and dominant components. The CJEU stated at paragraph 34 of its judgment in Case C-591/12P, Bimbo SA v OHIM, that:

“.....it is necessary to ascertain, in each individual case, the overall impression made on the target public by the sign for which registration is sought, by means of, inter alia, an analysis of the components of a sign and of their relative weight in the perception of the target public, and then, in the light of that overall impression and all factors relevant to the circumstances of the case, to assess the likelihood of confusion.”

19. It would be wrong, therefore, artificially to dissect the trade marks, although it is necessary to take into account their distinctive and dominant components and to give due weight to any other features which are not negligible and therefore contribute to the overall impressions they create. The trade marks to be compared are:

Opponent’s trade mark	Applicant’s trade mark
DEFINE

20. The opponent’s trade mark consists of the word “DEFINE” presented in block capital letters. As a single word the meaning of which I am satisfied will be very well-known to average consumers and in which no part is highlighted or emphasised in any way, the overall impression it conveys and its distinctiveness lies in its totality.

21. The applicant’s trade mark consists of a number of components. The first, is a device of a stylised human figure in purple accompanied by what appears to be a stylised device of a ribbon in blue, the totality presented in a pose reminiscent of the ribbon exercise performed in gymnastics routines. The figure is holding a blue star in what would be its left hand. The second component consists of the words “DEFINE ME” in the same colour blue as the ribbon device. The words are in a slightly stylised but unremarkable script. Like the word “DEFINE”, the word “ME” and its meaning will be very well-known to the average consumer.

22. Below these words and separated by full stops in the same colour purple there appears the words “DANCE”, “FITNESS” and “FUN” in the same script as the words “DEFINE ME”. The final component is a black square.

23. Although the black square will contribute to the overall impression conveyed, acting as it does as a background upon which the other components are presented, it has very little if any distinctive character. Given their size and positioning within the trade mark as a whole and their likely descriptive character in relation to many of the goods and services for which registration has been sought, the same conclusion applies to the words “DANCE”, “FITNESS” and “FUN”. The stylised human figure and ribbon device which is positioned at the top of the trade mark is distinctive. The words “DEFINE ME” which appear immediately below this device are also distinctive and, in my view, create a unit, the meaning of which is different to the individual words of which it is composed. Considered overall, it is the stylised human figure and ribbon device and the words “DEFINE ME” which dominate the applicant’s trade mark making a roughly equal contribution to the overall impression it conveys and its distinctive character.

The visual comparison

24. The competing trade marks coincide in respect of the word “DEFINE”, which is the only word in the opponent’s trade mark and the first word in the unit “DEFINE ME” in the applicant’s trade mark. Inter alia, the stylised human figure and ribbon device are alien to the opponent’s trade mark. Whilst I do not place any great reliance on the capacity of the various colours in the applicant’s trade mark to distinguish between the trade marks at issue, balancing the similarities and differences, considered overall, I regard the degree of visual similarity between the competing trade marks to be fairly low.

The aural comparison

25. It is well established that when a trade mark consists of a combination of words and figurative components, it is by the word components that the trade mark is most likely to be referred to. Given their size, positioning and descriptive credentials, I think it most unlikely that the average consumer would articulate the words “DANCE”, “FITNESS” and “FUN”. However, even if they are articulated, as the words “DEFINE ME” would be articulated first, the impact of these three words on the degree of aural similarity overall is likely to be negligible. As the words “DEFINE” and “ME” will be very well-known to the average consumer, their pronunciation is predictable i.e. the opponent’s trade mark will be articulated as the two syllable combination “DE-FINE” and the applicant’s trade mark as the three syllable combination “DE-FINE ME”. The fact that the word “DEFINE” would be articulated first in the applicant’s trade mark and is identical to the opponent’s trade mark results in an above average degree of aural similarity between them.

The conceptual comparison

26. Given my earlier comments, the conceptual messages likely to be conveyed to the average consumer by the device components in the applicant’s trade mark are likely to be of gymnastics or, as the words in the applicant’s trade mark suggests, dance and fitness; the opponent’s trade mark evokes no such conceptual imagery. As to the word components, as I mentioned earlier, the meaning of the word “DEFINE” will be very well-known to the average consumer, However, for the avoidance of doubt, I note that collinsdictionary.com explains it means, inter alia: “If you define something, you show, describe, or state clearly what it is and what its limits are, or what it is like” and “to delineate the form or outline of”. Those are the types of conceptual messages the opponent’s trade mark are likely to convey to the average consumer. In addition to the word “DEFINE”, the applicant’s trade mark also contains the first person singular pronoun “ME”. Although the words in the party’s trade marks are conceptually similar to the extent they either consist of or contain the word “DEFINE”, the applicant’s trade mark also contains a qualification i.e. “ME”, whereas the opponent’s trade mark does not.

Distinctive character of the earlier trade mark

27. The distinctive character of a trade mark can be appraised only, first, by reference to the goods in respect of which registration is sought and, secondly, by reference to the way it is perceived by the relevant public – Rewe Zentral AG v OHIM (LITE) [2002] ETMR 91. In determining the distinctive character of a trade mark and, accordingly, in assessing whether it is highly distinctive, it is necessary to make an overall assessment of the greater or lesser capacity of the trade marks to identify the goods for which they have been registered as coming from a particular undertaking and thus to distinguish those goods from those of other undertakings - Windsurfing Chiemsee v Huber and Attenberger Joined Cases C-108/97 and C-109/97 [1999] ETMR 585.

28. As I have no evidence of any use the opponent may have made of its earlier trade mark to take into account, I have only its inherent characteristics to consider. As I explained earlier, the word “DEFINE” and its various meanings will be well-known to the average consumer. While it may, at worst, be considered to allude to, for example, clothing which assists in defining one’s shape, it is, in my view, a trade mark possessed of an average degree of inherent distinctive character.

Likelihood of confusion

29. In determining whether there is a likelihood of confusion, a number of factors need to be borne in mind. The first is the interdependency principle i.e. a lesser degree of similarity between the respective trade marks may be offset by a greater degree of similarity between the respective goods and services and vice versa. As I mentioned above, it is also necessary for me to keep in mind the distinctive character of the opponent’s trade mark as the more distinctive it is, the greater the likelihood of confusion. I must also keep in mind the average consumer for the goods and services, the nature of the purchasing process and the fact that the average consumer rarely has the opportunity to make direct comparisons between trade marks and must instead rely upon the imperfect picture of them he has retained in his mind.

30. Confusion can be direct or indirect. Direct confusion involves the average consumer mistaking one trade mark for the other, while indirect confusion is where the average consumer realises the trade marks are not the same but puts the similarity that exists between the trade marks and goods and services down to the responsible undertakings being the same or related.

31. Earlier in this decision I reached the following conclusions:

- Absent an explanation from the opponent, I am not in a position to determine whether its goods in class 25 are similar to the applicant's services in classes 35 and 41;
- As the opponent's goods in class 25 are identical to many of the goods in the applicant's specification in class 25, I indicated I would proceed on the basis that the opponent's goods in class 25 are identical to all of the applicant's goods in class 25;
- The average consumer of the goods in class 25 is a member of the general public who, whilst not ignoring aural considerations, is likely to select such goods by predominantly visual means whilst paying at least a normal degree of attention during that process;
- The competing trade marks are visually similar to a fairly low degree, aurally similar to an above average degree and conceptually similar to the extent that they will both evoke the concept of definition;

- The opponent's trade mark is possessed of an average degree of inherent distinctive character.

32. In reaching a conclusion, I am proceeding on the basis most favourable to the opponent i.e., that its goods in class 25 are identical to all those of the applicant in the same class. If the opponent is unable to succeed in respect of identical goods, it will, of course, be in no better position in relation to any goods in class 25 of the application which are only similar to its goods. Approached on that basis and having reminded myself of my conclusions in relation to the degree of visual, aural and conceptual similarity between the competing trade marks, I think it highly unlikely that an average consumer paying even a normal degree of attention during the purchasing process will mistake the applicant's trade mark for that of the opponent i.e. in my view there will be no direct confusion.

33. That leaves indirect confusion to be considered. In L.A. Sugar Limited v By Back Beat Inc, Case BL O/375/10, Mr Iain Purvis Q.C., as the Appointed Person, explained the difference between direct and indirect confusion stating:

“16. Although direct confusion and indirect confusion both involve mistakes on the part of the consumer, it is important to remember that these mistakes are very different in nature. Direct confusion involves no process of reasoning – it is a simple matter of mistaking one mark for another. Indirect confusion, on the other hand, only arises where the consumer has actually recognized that the later mark is different from the earlier mark. It therefore requires a mental process of some kind on the part of the consumer when he or she sees the later mark, which may be conscious or subconscious but, analysed in formal terms, is something along the following lines: “The later mark is different from the earlier mark, but also has something in common with it. Taking account of the common element in the context of the later mark as a whole, I conclude that it is another brand of the owner of the earlier mark.”

34. In Duebros Limited v Heirler Cenovis GmbH, BL O/547/17, Mr James Mellor Q.C., as the Appointed Person, stressed that a finding of indirect confusion should not be made merely because the two trade marks share a common element. In this connection, he pointed out that it is not sufficient that a trade mark merely calls to mind another trade mark. This is mere association not indirect confusion.

35. In Whyte and Mackay Ltd v Origin Wine UK Ltd and Another [2015] EWHC 1271 (Ch), Arnold J. considered the impact of the CJEU's judgment in Bimbo, Case C-591/12P, on the court's earlier judgment in Medion v Thomson. He stated:

“18 The judgment in Bimbo confirms that the principle established in Medion v Thomson is not confined to the situation where the composite trade mark for which registration is sought contains an element which is identical to an earlier trade mark, but extends to the situation where the composite mark contains an element which is similar to the earlier mark. More importantly for present purposes, it also confirms three other points.

19 The first is that the assessment of likelihood of confusion must be made by considering and comparing the respective marks — visually, aurally and conceptually — as a whole. In Medion v Thomson and subsequent case law, the Court of Justice has recognised that there are situations in which the average consumer, while perceiving a composite mark as a whole, will also perceive that it consists of two (or more) signs one (or more) of which has a distinctive significance which is independent of the significance of the whole, and thus may be confused as a result of the identity or similarity of that sign to the earlier mark.

20 The second point is that this principle can only apply in circumstances where the average consumer would perceive the relevant part of the composite mark to have distinctive significance independently of the whole. It does not apply where the average consumer would perceive the composite mark as a unit having a different meaning to the meanings of the separate components. That includes the situation where the meaning of one of the components is qualified by another component, as with a surname and a first name (e.g. BECKER and BARBARA BECKER).

21 The third point is that, even where an element of the composite mark which is identical or similar to the earlier trade mark has an independent distinctive role, it does not automatically follow that there is a likelihood of confusion. It remains necessary for the competent authority to carry out a global assessment taking into account all relevant factors.”

36. Although the competing trade marks either consist of or contain the well-known word “DEFINE”, in my view, the word “DEFINE” does not play an independent distinctive role in the applicant’s trade mark. Rather, it combines with the word “ME” to create a unit, the conceptual meaning of which is different to the meaning of the word “DEFINE” alone. That, together with the other visual, aural and conceptual differences between the trade marks at issue I have already identified is, in my view, sufficient to avoid a likelihood of indirect confusion. Having concluded there is no likelihood of either direct or indirect confusion, the opposition under section 5(2)(b) of the Act fails and is dismissed accordingly.

The applicant’s services in classes 35 and 41

37. Earlier in this decision I mentioned the consequences of the opponent’s failure to explain why it considered its goods in class 25 to be similar to the applicant’s services in classes 35 and 41. In doing so, I pointed to some very obvious examples of why, given the breadth of services for which registration is being sought, such an explanation was necessary. Having reached the conclusion that the opposition fails in relation to identical goods in class 25, even if the opponent had identified services such as “Mail order retail services for clothing” and “Wholesale services in relation to clothing” in class 35 of the application, as such services are, at best, only similar to the opponent’s goods in class 25, I see no reason why a different conclusion would be appropriate.

Overall conclusion

38. The opposition based upon section 5(2)(b) fails and, subject to any successful appeal, the application will proceed to registration.

Costs

39. The tribunal wrote to the parties at the conclusion of the evidence rounds. Those letters included the following paragraph:

“If you intend to make a request for an award of costs, complete and return the attached pro-forma by 30 October 2018. If it is not completed and returned, no costs, other than official fees arising from the action (excluding extensions of time), will be awarded. You must include a breakdown of the actual costs, including accurate estimates of the number of hours spent on each of the activities listed and any travel costs. Please note that The Litigants in Person (Costs and Expenses) Act 1975 (as amended) sets the minimum level of compensation for litigants in person in Court proceedings at £19.00 an hour” (my emphasis).

40. As the applicant did not respond to that invitation (either by the deadline mentioned or prior to the issuing of this decision) and as she has not incurred any official fees in the defence of her application, I make no order as to costs.
