BARBADOS—
Notes—
In a communication to the Secretary-General of the United Nations dated 16 March, 1967, the Prime Minister of Barbados made the following declaration concerning the succession by Barbados to treaties extended or applied to the territory of Barbados by the United Kingdom prior to independence: "The Government of Barbados, conscious of the desirability of maintaining existing legal relationships, and conscious of its obligation under international law to honour its treaty commitments, acknowledges the many treaty rights and obligations of the Government of the United Kingdom in respect of Barbados (including treaty rights and obligations in respect of the former Federation of the West Indies) were succeeded to by Barbados upon independence by virtue of customary international law. 2. Since, however, it is likely that by virtue of customary international law certain treaties may have lapsed at the date of independence of Barbados, it seems essential that each treaty should be subjected to legal examination. It is proposed after this examination has been completed, to indicate which, if any, of the treaties which may have lapsed by customary international law the Government of Barbados wishes to treat as having lapsed.

BARBADOS (continued)—

3. It is desired that it be presumed that each treaty has been legally succeeded to by Barbados and that action be based on this presumption until a decision is reached that it should be regarded as having lapsed. Should the Government of Barbados be of the opinion that it has legally succeeded to a treaty and wishes to terminate the operation of the treaty, it will in due course give notice of termination in the terms thereof."

In a communication to the Secretary-General of the United Nations dated 16 December, 1967, the Government of the United Kingdom made the following declaration:

"The Government of the United Kingdom hereby declare that, upon Barbados becoming an independent Sovereign State on 30 November, 1966, they ceased to have the obligations or rights which they formerly held, as the authority responsible for the administration of Barbados, by virtue of any international instrument applying to Barbados."

LESOTHO—

Note—

In a communication to the Secretary-General of the United Nations dated 5 March, 1969, the Government of Lesotho made the following Declaration concerning their succession to treaties extended or applied to the former territory of Basutoland by the United Kingdom prior to independence:

“Reference is made to the Declaration of the Government of the Kingdom of Lesotho in relation to its treaty relationships dated March 22, 1967. [See Treaty Series No. 107 (1967), Cmnd. 3492.]

As regards bilateral treaties validly concluded by the Government of the United Kingdom on behalf of the country formerly known as Basutoland, or validly applied or extended by the said Government to the country known as Basutoland, the Government of the Kingdom of Lesotho, it will be recalled, willingly undertook to apply within its territory, on a basis of reciprocity, the terms of all such treaties for a period of 24 months from the date of independence, that is, until October 4, 1968, unless abrogated or modified earlier by mutual consent. That time has now expired without the Government of the Kingdom of Lesotho being able within that period to evaluate all the treaties.

The Government of the Kingdom of Lesotho, mindful of the desirability of continuity of treaty relationships consistent with its independent status, and desirous of entering negotiations with the various States concerned in relation to the possible modification or continuance of such treaties, has decided to extend the period during which it will apply, on a basis of reciprocity and in accordance with its Declaration of March 22, 1967, the terms of such bilateral treaties from October 4, 1968, until October 4, 1970.

Under the terms of the Government's Declaration of March 22, 1967, it is not necessary to extend the period in relation to multilateral treaties. As represented in that Declaration, the Government of the Kingdom of Lesotho will review each of the multilateral treaties which has been applied or extended to the country formerly known as Basutoland and indicate to the depositary concerned what steps it desires to take in relation to such instrument.

During this period of review, as stated in the Declaration of March 22, 1967, any party to a multilateral treaty which has, prior to independence, been applied or extended to the country formerly known as Basutoland, may, on a basis of reciprocity, rely as against Lesotho on the terms of such treaty. The Government of the Kingdom of Lesotho wishes it to be understood that this is merely a transitional arrangement. Under no circumstances should it be implied that by this Declaration Lesotho has either acceded to any particular treaty or indicated continuity of any particular treaty by way of succession.”
